

✓ DR. DEBORAH K. LONGSHORE, 1842—1919, of the class of 1872, died of heart disease, at Topeka, Kansas, March 24, 1919, aged seventy-seven years.

✓ DR. LUCINDA L. COMBS STRITTMATTER, 1849—1919, class of 1873, pioneer medical missionary in China, where she served from 1873 to 1881, died April 23, 1919, at the home of her son in Columbus, Ohio, aged seventy years.

✓ DR. FRANCES N. BAKER, 1842—1918, class of 1877, died September 30, 1918. She was born in Philadelphia, and received her education in Unionville, Chester County. She married Mr. James W. Baker, and studied medicine after she was married, graduating from the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania in 1877. Dr. Baker was the pioneer woman physician in Media, where she practiced for forty years, and was the first woman physician to be admitted to the Delaware County Medical Society, and for one year she served as president of the Society.

Dr. Baker

Dr. Baker practically realized her desire to die in harness. During the last two years she had been failing but did not relinquish her work until a month before her death.

✓ DR. SOPHRONIA A. TOMLINSON, 1839—1919, class of 1878, died February 12, 1919, at her home in Shiloh, New Jersey, aged eighty years. Dr. Tomlinson took her hospital training in the Nursery and Child's Hospital, Staten Island, New York. She began the practice of medicine at Fall River, Massachusetts, but a little later, went to Providence, R. I., where she practised for about thirty years. While here, she was attending physician to the Sophia Little Home, an institution for unfortunate girls and women.

✓ DR. CAROLINE V. ^{Wiley} STILL ANDERSON, 1848—1919, class of 1878, died at her home, 1926th South College Avenue, Philadelphia, June 2, 1919, aged seventy-one years. She was graduated from Oberlin College, and subsequently taught elocution and drawing at Howard University. After graduating from the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania, Dr. Anderson served a year's internship at the New England Hospital for Women and Children in Boston. She then returned to Philadelphia and began active practice, serving as City District Physician for several years. She married the Reverend Matthew Anderson in 1880, and had five children, two of whom survive her. Dr. Anderson assisted her husband very materially in establishing the Berean Manual Training and Industrial School, and served as assistant principal and head of the English department for a number of years. She was instrumental in establishing the first Young Women's Christian Association for colored women in Philadelphia.

✓ DR. REBECCA MOORE, 1835—1918, class of 1883, aged eighty-three years, died at the Friends' Boarding Home, Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, August 27, 1918. For many years a practitioner in Philadelphia, she was greatly interested in philanthropy, temperance, and peace work, and served at one time with the Pennsylvania Peace Society.

✓ DR. LUCY NORMAN TAPPAN, 1847—1919, born April 22, 1847, in Steubenville, Ohio, the daughter of Dr. Benjamin Tappan and Oella Stanton Tappan. She was educated at young ladies' seminaries in Steubenville, Ohio, and Morristown, Pennsylvania. Dr. Tappan entered the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania in 1883, from which she was graduated in 1886. She was resident physician in the Woman's Hospital of Philadelphia, for a year, and then went to the Nursery and Child's Hospital of Staten Island. Upon her return to Philadelphia, she was appointed assistant demonstrator of obstetrics to the College. This position she filled for two years, when she was appointed to the demonstratorship of obstetrics, and had charge of the department for attendance on obstetrical cases in their homes. After being Chief of the Maternity, in the southern part of the city, for several years, a position which she filled with great efficiency, she resigned and entered into private practice in Philadelphia. She was a valuable assistant, both in hospital and private practice to Dr. Anna E. Broomall, until she was forced by failing health to give up her work, and she removed from Philadelphia to Urbana, Ohio, in 1910. Dr. Tappan died in Urbana, March 15, 1919, a victim of heart disease, after an illness of several months.

✓ DR. JANE ROGERS BAKER, 1867—1918, born June 12, 1867, in Chester County, Pennsylvania. She entered the Woman's Medical College in 1890, working her way through college. After graduating, she practised in Maine for a short time, and then went to Tewksbury, Massachusetts, where she had charge of the State Institution there for a number of years. From Tewksbury, she